ALLIANCE BRIEFS

Travelers to Scottsbluff during the past few days report hearing dynamite explosions in the region of the Lake Alice dam, which lies midway between Alliance and Scottsbluff, just beyond the sandhills. There have been some cave-ins of a part of the dam, it is said, and the plan is to release the water and make repairs.

The Alliance Community Club has received a communication from the Nebraska Wesleyan in University Place, announcing that the members of its faculty are at the disposal of the Alliance Community Club for occasions when speakers from away are desired on the program. The Wesleyan faculty has been greatly increased and altogether includes many men and women who are able to give public addresses on very many subjects.

The Whitman correspondent to the Hyannis Tribune has this to say: it is rumored that shortly trains 39 and 40 are to be taken off and 43 and 44 will make the stops that they did previous to the present schedule. Let's not get too hopeful, but here is hoping this is no pipe dream and that it will really be true." People up in that neck of the woods are still sore over the last train schedules, but they haven't been able to get them corrected.

"While the police are willing to do all they can to restore runaway children to the arms of their anxious mothers," Chief Reed told a Herald reporter yesterday, "we are not in the nursery maid business. If I feel an uncontrollable desire to take care of children, I have a few at home that I can help watch any time." The chief was feeling a trifle peeved because some woman had called up the police judge and told him that she wasn't able to find the police when her young son had strayed away. The chief was ill that morning and had gone home to take a nap to rest up from doing double duty on the night and day force. The child, it appeared, had been playing in the sand pile in front of police headquarters, and the mother felt aggrieved because the chief wasn't there to nab him the minute she called up.

Chief of Police Reed sends out a warning against the slungshot. About every so often these become a fad with the smaller boys and some of the larger ones, and while they are in favor of the increase in broken window lights is sometimes awful. During the past week there have been half a dozen or more cases of windows developing mysterious holes in them. The chief doesn't go so far as to say that he will confiscate the slungshots and incarcerate the carriers of these deadly weapons, but we have a kind of a hunch that it will be poor policy from now on to handle them carelessly, at least in sight of the chief.
